Visit and save the world!

We know that some people have reservations about zoos, but as a charity, Bristol Zoo Gardens punches well above its weight with regard to education and conservation issues. It is involved with breeding programmes for dozens of critically endangered species, including Asiatic lions, South African penguins and Western Lowland gorillas.

Bristol Zoo is also currently promoting the recycling of old mobile phones through an organisation called Greener Solutions, who pass back funds to the zoo to support the primate charity Ape Action Africa (AAA). AAA is attempting to counter illegal mining which causes the destruction of the critically endangered lowland gorilla's forest habitat.

So not only does Bristol Zoo participate in vital breeding programmes for endangered species, it supports conservation projects within the zoo and out in the wild.
